

THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

The Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce

Program of Study	The Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce offers an interdisciplinary M.A. degree and serves in an advisory capacity with respect to the Ph.D. programs in international studies within the four departments — Business Administration, Economics, History, and Political Science — primarily related to the Patterson School. The typical M.A. candidate will spend three semesters (one and a half years) on campus. The M.A. degree program can be tailored with considerable flexibility to meet the career needs of any particular student. Appropriate courses can be selected from the relevant offerings of virtually all parts of the University, including the Colleges of Agriculture, Allied Health, Law, Medicine, and Social Professions. The M.A. program is especially useful for the student desiring a career in any of the nonacademic fields in foreign affairs, such as international banking, international business, international journalism (foreign correspondent), or service in such government agencies as the U.S. Department of State and international organizations such as the United Nations.
Research Facilities	Students at the Patterson School have full access to the main University library and appropriate specialized libraries, as well as to the University's computer facilities and certain specialized research institutes and programs, when relevant.
Financial Aid	A limited number of full ($2800 per academic year) and partial (less than $2800) Patterson Fellowships are available for highly qualified students. Patterson Fellowships are considered nonservice, and are therefore tax exempt. No other forms of aid are routinely available, although Patterson School officials can provide some information on job opportunities for students or their spouses and information on various student loan possibilities.
Cost of Study	The 1976-77 tuition for Kentucky residents is $265 per semester, or $530 per academic year. Tuition for out-of-state students is $630 per semester, or $1260 per academic year. These tuition rates include all mandatory fees. A student health service fee (optional) is $12 per semester. Textbooks average $100 per semester. All Patterson Fellowship holders, regardless of residence, pay only the tuition rate for Kentucky residents.
Cost of Living	In 1976-77, on-campus University housing for single graduate students varies from $292 to $674 per semester, and from $95 to $120 per month for married students. The cost of University food service varies from $266.50 to $329.50 per semester per student. Costs for commercial or private off-campus housing and food vary from somewhat below to well above the costs given for University accommodations. Student life at the University is quite informal, and costs for such things as clothing, laundry, and leisure activities are below the national averages in these categories.
Student Group	The Patterson School's student body is small and carefully selected, with no more than 15 to 20 students currently being admitted each year. Some are single, some are married. Most are from the United States, but some are from other nations. Most are in their twenties, but some are older students with professional experience in ongoing foreign affairs careers. Currently, about half the student body is male. About 25 percent of the students are Patterson Fellowship holders.
The Community	The University campus is a cohesive unit located six blocks from the heart of Lexington, a city of modest size (180,000 in the greater Lexington area) in the center of the famous Bluegrass region. Noted for the breeding of thoroughbred, standardbred, and saddle horses, the Bluegrass region immediately surrounding Lexington includes more than a hundred of the most celebrated horse farms in the world. The nearest major city is Cincinnati, a one-hour drive to the north via I-75. The University has long enjoyed a close and cordial relationship with the surrounding community, which can best be described as a pleasant small city in an idyllic farming region.
The University and The School	The University, founded in 1865, is the largest (about 20,000 students) and most prominent institution of higher education in the state, with the full range of programs and activities associated with a major university. A friendly, informal atmosphere prevails. Diverse athletic, cultural, and recreational opportunities exist within the University and the general community. The Patterson School enjoys especially cordial ties with all parts of the University, as well as with many elements within the community. To supplement and complement its professional training program, the School also serves as a research center for international studies. Activities within this context include two research conferences each academic year, bringing together from 75 to 100 distinguished scholars from around the world. The School publishes a newsletter and twelve paperback research monographs (the Sage Professional Papers in International Studies series) each year, plus a series of occasional papers. The School also organizes and sponsors, often in partnership with other organizations, a variety of programs designed to serve Kentucky, the nation, and the global community. Examples include an annual one-day world affairs institute for high school students and a similar one-day institute for adults. The Patterson School cooperates closely in a number of ways with the International Studies Association and with other professional societies.
Applying	Application forms for admission to the M.A. program of the Patterson School and applications for a Patterson Fellowship should be requested from the address given below. The deadline for applying for a Patterson Fellowship is February 1 for the following academic year, with successful prime candidates notified in mid-March and successful alternates notified somewhat later. The deadlines for applications for admission only are June 14 for the following fall semester, and November 1 for the following spring semester, but earlier submissions are encouraged in all cases. Each application must include, in addition to the standard forms, transcripts from all previous colleges and universities attended, at least three letters of academic reference, a personal statement of career goals from the applicant, and verbal and quantitative GRE scores. Successful applicants for admission will ordinarily have a grade point average of at least 3.0 (on a 4.0 scale) and a combined verbal and quantitative GRE score of about 1200 or higher.
Correspondence and Information	The Director The Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce University of Kentucky Lexington, Kentucky 40506 Telephone: (606) 257-4666 or 4667

(over)

THE FACULTY

The Director of the Patterson School and Patterson Chair Professor of International Studies is Dr. Vincent Davis, who received his Ph.D. in political science from Princeton University in 1961. Dr. Davis, who has held regular faculty appointments at Princeton, Dartmouth, and the Graduate School of International Studies (Denver), served for six years as the first Executive Director of the International Studies Association. His teaching and research specializations are international politics, foreign policy, and military policy. Working closely with Dr. Davis is the Associate Director, Dr. Maurice A. East, who received his Ph.D. in political science from Princeton University in 1969, and is now Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky.

In addition, the Patterson School has more than 50 faculty associates who work closely with the School's students but hold their primary appointments in other University colleges and departments, including Agriculture (Agricultural Economics), Anthropology, Business Administration (International Business), Communications, Economics, Geography, History, Law, Medicine (Community Health), Political Science, Psychology, Social Professions, Sociology, and Statistics.

An occasional Visiting Scholar in Residence is part of the Patterson School's research program. Each year, numerous distinguished guests visit the Patterson School for periods ranging from a day or two to several weeks. In recent years, these distinguished guests have included:

Bernhard Abrahamsson, Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver.
 Samir Anabtawi, Professor, Vanderbilt University.
 Wendell Bell, Yale University.
 Joseph Black, Rockefeller Foundation.
 Kenneth Boulding, Professor, University of Colorado.
 June Dreyer, Miami University.
 Donald Easum, U.S. Assistant Secretary of State.
 Richard Falk, Princeton University.
 Philip Farley, Director, U.S. Arms Control Agency.
 Robert Gard, Major General, U.S. Army.
 Alexander George, Stanford University.
 Federico Gil, Professor, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
 Denis Healey, former Defence Minister and Member of Parliament, Great Britain.
 Thomas Hughes, President, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.
 Wynfred Joshua, Stanford Research Institute.
 Stanley Karnow, the New Republic.
 Olav Knudsen, Professor, University of Oslo.
 Donald Marcus, the European Common Market.
 Ali Mazrui, Professor, Makerere University, Uganda.
 Edward L. Miles, University of Washington.
 Zdravko Mlinar, Professor, University of Ljubljana, Yugoslavia.
 E. Raymond Platig, U.S. Department of State.
 George Reid, Office of the Prime Minister, Barbados.
 Dean Rusk, former U.S. Secretary of State.
 Fayez A. Sayegh, Government of Kuwait.
 John Sheehan, Governor, Federal Reserve System.
 Neil Sheehan, The New York Times.
 Yuri Shvedkov, Institute of U.S.A., Soviet Academy of Sciences, Moscow.
 Kalman Silvert, Professor, New York University, and the Ford Foundation.
 Fred Sondermann, Colorado College.
 Susan Strange, Royal Institute of International Affairs, London.
 John Turner, University of Minnesota.
 Stansfield Turner, Vice Admiral, U.S. Navy.
 John Paul Vann (deceased), Senior U.S. Adviser, U.S. Mission to South Vietnam.
 Peter Van Ness, Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver.
 Philip Windsor, London School of Economics.

Director Vincent Davis and Executive Assistant Lillian Pancorbo (left) discuss the future programs of the Patterson School with Visiting Professor Roger Blanpain (Catholic University of Louvain, Belgium) and a group of students.

The Patterson Tower on the campus, home of the Patterson School of Diplomacy.